

ONLINE MASTER OF PUBLIC HEALTH (MPH): YOUR PATHWAY OPTIONS

Deciding which specialist pathway to pursue on the online MPH programme with the University of Liverpool?

In addition to the general route, there are three options to choose from. Designed with professional development needs in mind, each route equips students with the expertise to put public health principles into effect in a variety of settings including research, practice and policy.

WHAT ARE THE PATHWAY OPTIONS?

General Route

Develop a critical understanding of current and emerging global public health challenges, and explore solutions to improve the health of communities and reduce health inequalities.

Global Mental Health Route

Deepen your knowledge of the key issues impacting global mental health and the contributors that underpin global mental health inequalities.

International Public Health Route

Discover how public health differs across the globe, including programme and policy challenges in low-income countries.

Management of Health Systems Route

Evaluate governmental and market healthcare activities and the behaviour of consumers and organisations in these healthcare markets. Use economic evaluation and leadership strategies to enhance public health provision.

WHO IS IT FOR?

Our MPH pathways are ideal for graduates who want to build on their academic and professional background in a specialist area of public health, so they can realise their career ambitions. As a culmination to the MPH, students will select a dissertation topic reflective of their pathway allowing them to explore an area of interest in more depth.

CAREER PATHS

This qualification could help you progress in public health research and practice across a range of sectors, such as:

- Health organisations
- Governmental organisations
- Charities
- NGOs

WHY STUDY?

The MPH provides you with a global knowledge base of public health best practices. You'll take a comprehensive approach, engaging with peers to discuss the latest public health challenges.

CAREER OUTCOMES

The Master of Public Health (MPH) programme will provide you with the skills needed to advance in your chosen speciality within the field of public health. Past students on the MPH have come from a variety of clinical or social science backgrounds. The programme can help you progress in the field of public health whether you are a nurse, dentist, doctor, nutritionist, or other health and social care professional.

FIND OUT MORE

Website: online.liverpool.ac.uk/master-of-public-health/

Email: enquiries@study-online.liverpool.ac.uk